

BENUE-CONGO COMPARATIVE WORDLIST

Retyped and updated by Roger Blench
This version: Thursday, 02 July 2009

PLEASE READ CAREFULLY BEFORE USING THIS DOCUMENT

1. This is a version of the data sections of the Benue-Congo Comparative Wordlist (BCCW) first published in Ibadan in 1968 and 1972 in two volumes by the West African Linguistic Society. The authors were Kay Williamson and Kiyoshi Shimizu for Volume I and Kay Williamson for Volume II. It was typed in Port Harcourt by Mr. George Syder in the 1990s into an old Mac format, transferred to IBM in ANSI and converted by me gradually over the years to Unicode. The final push was the possibility of integrating it with the Comparalex online database. However, I do not guarantee that some conversion errors do not remain as well as typos. Unfortunately, I first used a system of fields for diacritics, which cannot be replaced automatically; all the lexical entries have been hand-replaced, but the language names remain in this format. One of Mr. Syder's more endearing habits was to attempt to interpret blobs on the original mimeo as IPA symbols, and he was sometimes ingenious in this, not necessarily consulting with Kay before entering the characters. I have tried to eliminate this despite my admiration for his enterprise.
2. The introductory material was not typed, and as the entries are gradually being updated there can confusion with transcription systems. Even between Volume I and Volume II of the published version there clearly changes to orthographic conventions. Still, printed form has the conversions between the source and the normalised forms as well as explanations for the conventions. Some of the symbols, (such as the vertical stroke above the vowels for mid-tone) are not used today and I have begun to eliminate them. Still, the conversion process meant that they are still retained in places.
3. The original collaborators are now dead, except for Dr. Shimizu, who appears to have lost interest in African languages. However I discussed the system with Kay Williamson before her death; she was never able to see the final product.
4. The treatment was intended to update the original dataset rather than preserve it. For the original, see the printed version. However, I was very optimistic about the possibility of achieving this and the updating is very sporadic. Still, I think it is probably more useful than nothing at all.
5. My plan was to use a database-like format to create potential entries for all the languages that have become known since the original document was prepared. To this end every language was numbered, so that once a table was created, the sort order would put the languages in a more logical order. To my mind this should be the reverse of the BCCW order, which started with Bantu and climbed 'upwards' to Benue-Congo. Here the list starts with Ukaan, the mysterious noun-class languages spoken at the confluence and then goes through Kainji, Plateau etc. through Bantoid and then to Bantu, broadly following our current understanding of the evolution towards Narrow Bantu. For some of the glosses I have undertaken this restructuring, but constant changes to the number of languages makes this problematic. The problem with this system was that the constant discovery of new languages in Nigeria meant that they had to be inserted in the numbering. I got around this by using xxxa and xxxb; thus the sort still works. Nonetheless, the argument for having the material in a proper database is now very strong. However, such a conversion would mean an immense amount of further data cleaning, separating out multiple glosses. Time and resources are against me on this one.
6. I originally imagined that it would be possible to fill in orthographic or phonetic source material and normalised material in an IPA-like format. Where both forms were given in the original I have tried to split them between columns, but this is an immense task for every entry. Another idea that is clearly impractical within real time. However, the spaces are there in the database format. I also began to experiment with colours to try and help the reader separate out the different columns but this is yet to be applied systematically.

7. One of the most problematic aspects of the BCCW is the choice of glosses. Very common words were omitted and obscure ones ('be sticky', 'four hundred') included. Some were extremely vague ('palm tree', 'pig'). These ideally need to be split up, and I have begun this process with 'palm tree'.

8. Some of the transcriptions are so strange they should be treated with preservation orders, like historical monuments. I really wonder about all the subdots applied at random to vowels and consonants. What for example is ʒ (Duka?). Who could have imagined such a sound existed in a West Kainji language? Even when the orthography is modernised it is perhaps worth retaining these in the database.

9. Some of the data is worryingly inaccurate. Checking the languages I know well, something 50% of the Tarok glosses were simply wrong or gave an obscure sense of a word, rather than the normal gloss. The process of checking all the data is endless, and therefore it should be used with caution.

10. In the original, numerals were placed at the end of volume II. Here they are in correct alphabetical order.

11. The gloss 'man, husband' was not retyped in error, and it is missing from the present version.

My codes

S = Source and eventually a database should have the sources for each dataset coded

RN = Root number. Once the dataset is relatively complete it is possible to assign most roots to a subset and then number and code them. This has been done for a few words, so it is possible to see how the system is envisaged.

PRINTING OUT

I really don't advise you to print this out; it is nearly 2000 pages and a lot of it is empty space. It is definitely an on-screen document.

Roots analysed by number

1a. #-kira

1b #-yVIV

1c #-wira

2. #N-gbi(ga)

3. #-kpakp-

4. #-saNa

cf. Common Mumuye ʃɔŋ. Also a widespread root in Bantoid e.g. Mambila sàŋ, Tikar a-sàŋ, possibly also Cross River Okpoto kɛ-sa. The relationship between this root and 8 #-taNa is unclear –it looks like a fricativised version of the same root, but if so, then the same process must have occurred several times.

5. #-gbVbV

6. #-tika

7. #-bVNV

The Ningye citation is a guess – that quiver is a compound containing the ban- element. Strangely, Meeussen omitted this from his list of Bantu lexical reconstructions although it is clearly proto-Bantu. I have included here fricativised roots such as Mokpe mò-vànja an Tiv, assuming this process has occurred independently.

8. #-taNa

9. #-kVna

10. #-tʃebe

11. #-mVNi

BCCW (1:16) claims, inaccurately, that this is diagnostic for Jarawan Bantu.

12. #-kVt-

13. #IVbV

14. #kVyu

103. STONE, ROCK

Proposed analysis of roots

1. #-taCV

1a. #tari

1b. #saN-

cf. Common Mumuye root tari (Shimizu 1979: Root 50) Yandang tari

2. #-faN-

This root was probably borrowed into Chadic, e.g. Mwaghavul paŋ. However, it is possible that it is a borrowing from Chadic meaning originally ‘flat rock’, which also occurs in other Plateau languages.

3. #-kpVN-

3a. #-kpVN-

3b. #-gbAN-

4. #ŋgoC-

5. #-loN-
